

Legacies

Moya Denman writes: "My late husband, Sir Roy Denman, was a passionate European. To continue his life's work I have helped to set up the Bruges-Natolin UK European Scholarships Fund. Governments of EU Member States – and many other branches of modern society - need well informed advisers if they are to work effectively and constructively on our joint behalves."

The College of Europe offers outstanding preparatory courses for young Europeans to work with others of their ilk. To sponsor a student at the College is to continue work already achieved towards a stronger understanding among the nations of our continent at a time when transnational cooperation is of fundamental importance.

Would you consider making a legacy to the Fund in your Will? This is a tax-efficient way of donating, whatever the amount. Were you able to give enough to cover the tuition fees for a student at the College for one or more years, we would be glad to attach your name to a specific scholarship.

Adding a gift to the Bruges-Natolin UK European Scholarships Fund to your existing Will is easily done by using a Codicil (a Codicil is a supplement to a Will than can make changes or amendments and allow additions to part of that Will). While it is possible to make a Codicil without using a solicitor with experience in wills and probates, we would recommend that you seek legal advice on the type of legacy and suitable wording either for a new Will or a Codicil. This will ensure that your wishes are properly expressed and confusion avoided.

The Bruges-Natolin UK European Scholarships Fund is grateful for any legacy gift, large or small. In order to be able to show our appreciation, it would be helpful if you could give an indication of your plans. We understand that this is a statement of your present intentions only and all information will be treated in the strictest confidence.
